A Godsend to Mothers

"I want to tell you what your Kickapoo Indian Oil did for my son. He woke up almost crazy with cramps in his stomach and bowels. He was relieved by the Oil as soon as I used it and in less than 15 minutes later he went to sleep. Thanks to this remedy which is really a doctor in the house."—Mrs. F. Williamson, West Point, N. ONE HEALTH OFFICER
WHO DID THINGS

By all odds the sturdiest, most vigorous and most refreshing personality that has been mingled with the municipality of St. Paul for the past twenty years is Dr. J. H. Ohage (pronounced "Oh-geel"), who has just resigned his post as public health officer. He has done the work of a dozen men, and is a protest against the prevalent disposition of corporate influence which, as he believed, wielded its power in charity to the public good.

Pointing the wide boom of the Mississippi river between the Robert street and Smith avenue bridges is a beauty spot known as Harriet Island. On this island Dr. Ohage two years ago succeeded, after a long struggle and amid all possible discouragements, in establishing the first system of free public baths and play grounds at St. Paul ever had. The doctor is no sentimentalist. He is one of the most skillful surgeons and physicians in the Northwest, and first of all a man of science. The sterling German character is shown in his acts as well as in his speech. He was in large measure as health officer responsible for the sanitary well-being of the city, and he knew that public baths would go far toward lessening the sickness and death rate. It was of importance to him, both professionally and as a philanthropic citizen of St. Paul, to secure as good a showing in the vital statistics as possible. So enthusiastic was he over the bath question that he refused an offer of $50,000 for Harriet Island that he might deed it to the public for the use of the people—which he did. The island was improved, buildings erected, the natural attractiveness of the place enhanced and many thousands of "kids" and their parents have since invoked blessings upon the head of Dr. Ohage.

Then the Omaha Railroad Company purposed laying a spur track across the approach to the island, which would not only "jar" upon these pleasant surroundings, but practically ruin the lives of the little chaps that went there to swim. The doctor, of course, fought this proposition from the start. He desired the condemnation of a small strip of land along the foot of the bluff for a public road. That strip, upon which the railroad is to put its spur track, is now occupied by a little pickle factory and one or two other small concerns. The City Council, supported by the Commercial Club, seemed to think the whim of a railroad company and the sacred presence of the pickle factory of far greater importance than the baths, which it had cost Dr. Ohage so much time, labor and money to establish.

At last, seeing no hope remained that this threatened public enemy might be averted, the doctor resigned.

"I have fought to the end of my strength for the good of the people," he said in his letter of resignation to the Mayor, "and seeing no prospects for any success, I shall from now on retire to private life. My resignation may be of more good to the island than my remaining in office—may God grant it."

It is the desire of many to see Dr. Ohage Mayor of St. Paul some day. They think that nothing more beneficial to the city could happen than that. But no such good fortune, it is feared, awaits the Minnesota capitalist. The doctor, who was the most fearless health officer the city ever had—one of the very few, indeed, that ever accomplished anything of high practical value—organized certain powerful interests by his impartial enforcement of the sanitary laws, and those interests would no doubt defeat any effort to place him in the Mayor's chair.

For example, he tried to compel the use of smoke consumers on all the public and business buildings of the city. He was defeated in the courts, but did succeed in arousing the antagonism of "business men." He never allowed the threats, protests or importunities of moneyed interests to sway him a hair's breadth in the performance of his duty under the law.—New York Commercial.

SCIENTIFIC BUNTING WILL WIN MANY BASE-BALL GAMES

BY CONNIE MACK,
Manager of the Philadelphia American League Club.

Successful hitting at opportune times is an art worthy of the highest cultivation. It is not given to every baseball player to be able to judge accurately just when and where to place a ball that will result in the most benefit to his club. There are many players who will fail nineteen times out of twenty to hit successfully when the runner is stealing. This is due to the lack of proper training and the absence of those qualities that stamp a man as a superior player. The same applies to sacrifice hitting. Many of the very best players now in the game cannot sacrifice when called upon to do so. This is especially true of the player who is known as a slugger.

In order to make team work a success all players should have a clear and distinct understanding among themselves. The batter should know when an attempt is to be made to steal. The catcher should be an understanding whether it is intended for the batter to help out the runner by trying to hit the ball or permit the runner to go through the play without any assistance in the shape of a hit.

With a fast runner on first, a good single will often land the player on third, especially if he gets a good start on the play. This play can often be made by bunting towards first or third base. Left-hand players are usually the best bunters. This is due to the fact that, being on the near side of the home plate, they have less distance to travel to reach the initial bag. Fully one of the Athletics is one of the best right-handed bunters in the country, and by his clever work at the bat he has rendered invaluable assistance to his club and has helped to win many games that would have been lost with a less clever man at the bat. Not only is such a man valuable as an individual to a club, but his work in this direction is an example to the other members, and an indirect result is accomplished, in addition to a direct one.

CONFESSIONS OF A WIFE

A man does not like to be loved too solemnly; whereas I think a woman builds within her heart an altar to an unknown god, and leaves her happiest hours to steal away and worship, says the writer of "Confessions" in the June Century. . . . Masculine tenderness is said to respond to tears. I do not find it so. Rather, I should say that a man's devotion fades under salt water like a bathing suit, proving unseizable in the very element for which it is supposed to be adapted. . . . I begin to feel now as I used to do before we were married, that a woman must not expect too much of a man; she must not expect him to understand; she must remind herself that he is a man and cannot. For a time we have been one, you and I. . . . Men are so busy and so insolently strong. There is something cruel in their physical freedom. . . . A sensible middle-aged woman once told me that she and her husband came to the brink of a divorce over the first home they built (they are rather an unusual happy couple), and that the only way she prevented the catastrophe was by saying: "Have it all your own way; I will not express another wish about this house." Yet they lived in it comfortably for fifteen years. . . . Something of the bondage of maidenhood seems to remain in a wife, a kind of impossibility—I do not know how to express it—a power not herself which makes for silence, the terrible law which takes from a woman's love even that which it hath, and forbids her to love even her own husband. . . .

Why is it that color means something less to me than it used to do? Once I should have responded to the tinting of this room (it is really very good in every nerve. Now, somehow, it does not seem to matter very much I suppose that is physical, too. Most things are, to women. Who said, "There is a spiritual body"? Paul, I suppose. Nevertheless, there is philosophy as sound as it is subtle in those few words. . . .

ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

There will be a meeting at 11 a. m. Friday of the committee having in charge Hawaii's plans for an exhibition at the St. Louis exposition. At this meeting it is intended to effect permanent organization and to discuss plans to make the exhibit a successful one. Nominations for places on the committee have been sent in from Hawaii and Maui. Kanai is yet to be heard from. On Hawaii, A. L. Lonsdon of Hamakua, John D. Parson of Kona and John T. Moir of Hilo are the men. The Maui representatives are A. N. Repokai, D. Baldwin and R. C. Searle. The meeting Friday will be in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce.
